OVERVIEW

Andrew Ramos is an associate in Cetrulo LLP's Boston office, where he represents corporate clients in complex civil litigation, including product liability, toxic tort, and commercial disputes. His practice encompasses all phases of litigation, including discovery, motion practice, deposition preparation, settlement negotiations, and trial preparation.

Andrew serves as national coordinating counsel for Fortune 500 clients, assisting in the management of litigation portfolios involving more than 500 lawsuits annually across multiple jurisdictions. In this role, he works closely with clients and local counsel nationwide to coordinate litigation strategy, evaluate potential exposure, oversee case developments, and facilitate efficient resolutions.

Andrew brings a unique combination of legal, technical, and commercial experience to his practice. Before joining Cetrulo, he gained litigation and regulatory experience at Saul Ewing LLP and the Massachusetts Office of the Attorney General's Gaming Enforcement Division. Prior to law school, Andrew worked as a Fire Construction Sales Engineer at Johnson Controls, where he developed technical proposals for large-scale commercial construction projects.

Andrew earned his Juris Doctor from Suffolk University Law School, completing a concentration in Business Law and Financial Services with honors. He received his Bachelor of Science in Industrial Distribution from Texas A&M University.
